Gov. Andrew Cuomo announced the bill Friday after the state Senate passed the measure 55-4 and the Assembly concurred 63-19, according to the New York Times. It would ban flavored e-cigarettes and requires manufacturers to label the devices "no smoking" to make it clear they are not for smoking cigarettes. "Flavored e-cigarettes entice children to use tobacco and pose a danger to public health," Cuomo said in a statement. "We can no longer wait for this crisis to worsen. We must act immediately and decisively." The bill is similar to the one that was introduced in the Maryland House of Delegates last month and has been introduced in several other states. It is expected to be enacted into law. It is also the first time a major city has taken such extreme action regarding electronic cigarettes. "New York City's ban on flavored e-cigarettes is nothing short of reckless," Michelle Fox, co-founder and director of New York-based advocacy group Vapers
