The resolution was introduced at the end of the January's budget process as a way to bolster the stormwater fees that were approved by voters in 2007 as a measure to help finance infrastructure upgrades and other projects. At the time, the city estimated it would levy $2.5 million in fees in the coming fiscal year, but the state's recession curtailed that amount. Now, the city has about $9.5 million in unspent stormwater funds. Supervisor of Finance and Technology April Gallegos said she created the resolution in part because the city has set aside a large amount of money for the project, which is expected to pay for upgrades to the storm drain system, 3da54e8ca3
